Collaborative Governance and Urban Revitalization: City Strategies for Reducing Poverty and Inequality

» Date:
October 18, 2018
3:00 - 4:30 pm

» Location:
Georgia Tech
Stephen C. Hall Building
Room 102

More About Michael J. Rich

Michael J. Rich is Professor of Political Science and Environmental Sciences, and Director of the Policy Analysis Laboratory at Emory University. He is the author of Collaborative Governance for Urban Revitalization (with Robert Stoker) and Federal Policymaking and the Poor. His current research focuses on community building, neighborhood revitalization and local poverty reduction strategies. He has recently completed evaluation studies of the Atlanta Housing Authority's Moving to Work Demonstration to assess the effects of public housing innovations on the well-being of low- and moderate-income families and their children. He teaches courses on public policy, public policy analysis, community building and social change, poverty in America, and qualitative and multimethod research, among others.

Dr. Rich received his PhD in political science from Northwestern University and has held research appointments at the Brookings Institution and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. He previously taught at Brown University and was the founding executive director of The Providence Plan, a collaborative city-state-university initiative to revitalize the city of Providence and its neighborhoods. From 2000-2014 he served as the founding executive director of Emory's Center for Community Partnerships, a university-wide initiative to strengthen community-engaged scholarship, learning, and service.

Georgia Tech | School of Civil and Environmental Engineering
College of Engineering

Michael J. Rich

Professor, Political Science and Environmental Sciences
Director, Policy Analysis Laboratory
Emory University

Light Refreshments Provided

For More Information:
Dan Matisoff
matisoff@gatech.edu

Georgia Tech | School of Public Policy
Ivan Allen College of Liberal Arts