

The Strategic Energy Institute and the Energy, Policy, and Innovation Center have released the 2022 call for applications for the annual Spark Award.

The Spark Award is awarded to current Georgia Tech students who have demonstrated outstanding leadership in advancing student engagement with energy research at Georgia Tech with evidence of broader impacts and service/leadership.

Eligibility Requirements

Applicants must be:

- Graduate students in good standing
- Making satisfactory progress towards the completion of their program of study at Georgia Tech
- U.S. citizens

Interested students should send an application package to Sharon Murphy at the Strategic Energy Institute: SMurphy77@gatech.edu

Due Date: Friday, October 28th, 2022

The application packet should include:

- 1 page essay describing your motivation for studying energy topics, a description of your leadership activities related to energy research (mentoring, clubs, etc.), and a brief justification of why you think you should be the 2022 Spark Awardee.
- Your full name
- Your GTID
- Energy area of interest and name of advisor
- Enrollment status (Masters, PhD) and expected year of graduation.
- One page letter of recommendation from GT faculty mentor

*The 2022 Spark Award is $1,000.00.

Number of awards is variable, depending on funding.