: Excellence in scholarship, a commitment to diversity, and community service are the hallmarks of the Fulbright Program. In 1946, as the junior senator from Arkansas, J. William Fulbright introduced legislation to start a new international educational exchange program with an ambitious goal – to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries. The Fulbright Program now operates in 155 countries, and has supported over 300,000 students and scholars.

Awards for American Students

: (US$15,000 for 9 months beginning in September) Traditional Fulbright Student Awards are intended for graduate students, prospective graduate students, and junior professionals. American students can take up the award in one of three ways. are intended for Americans who plan to enroll in a graduate program at a Canadian university. are intended for students enrolled in a graduate program in the United States who wish to conduct research at a host institution in Canada for one academic year. are intended for researchers who have completed an undergraduate degree or a Master's degree at an American university and who wish to pursue one year of independent research in Canada. Grantees are expected to use the award to offset expenses such as housing, travel, tuition, and the like.

Fulbright Canada, in cooperation with the Department of Foreign Affairs, Trade and Development Canada, and six of Canada's leading research universities, is proud to offer the Fulbright Canada STEM award. This three-year program is valued at CAD$120,000 (tuition, fees, and an annual stipend of $20,000), and allows American students in the STEM fields to pursue their PhD at one of six partner universities in Canada. Students will study, conduct research, and be inspired in a technologically-advanced, diverse, and dynamic country. STEM partner universities include: the University of Alberta, the University of British Columbia, McGill University, Université de Montréal, the University of Toronto, and the University of Waterloo.

: Fulbright-MTVU Fellowships are for U.S. students to conduct research abroad for one academic year on study projects of their own design around an aspect of international musical culture. Up to four awards will be available to pursue projects around an aspect of international contemporary or popular music as a cultural force for expression. Preference will be given to creative projects that are conveyed in a dynamic fashion and are accompanied by a feasible plan.
