Breanna DiGiammarino is the education, research and social innovation category marketing director at Indiegogo. She has been responsible for developing key partnerships with institutions such as the Clinton Global Initiative University (CGI U), George Mason University, and Village Capital.

Prior to Indiegogo, Breanna was the Senior Associate at the Draper Richards Kaplan Foundation, a social venture fund in San Francisco, where she helped raise $30 million to support the company's second fund for social entrepreneurship called the Springstep Venture Fund and increased the number of applications from hundreds to thousands.

Before that, she was an Associate Consultant at The Bridgespan Group, the non-profit arm of Bain & Company. In this position, she consulted with high-impact educational organizations and foundations, including the Cristo Rey Network, to help urban students into work-study programs and worked with the Gates Foundation to improve low-income graduation rates.

Breanna was invited as a reader for the 2011 and 2012 Echoing Green social venture fellowship and the Haas Global Social Venture competition. She is also an Avanti Fellows advisory board member.

Breanna holds a Master of Public Administration in Nonprofit Management from the NYU Wagner School of Public Service and graduated with a B.A in Biology and Government from the University of Virginia.
